CALL FOR APPLICATIONS 2022
exchange scholarships for PhD students (six months)

at the Centre for Modern Indian Studies, University of Göttingen

within the framework of the DAAD (German Academic Exchange Service) "A New Passage to India" funding line.

Applications close 16 January 2022.

The Centre for Modern Indian Studies (CeMIS) at the University of Göttingen is dedicated to research and teaching about social, economic and political developments in modern India. The centre adopts an interdisciplinary approach to five major themes: Metamorphoses of the Political, Religion, Inequality and Diversity, Labour and Capital in Modern India, and Media and Public Spheres. The centre has five professors and more than 35 research fellows and Ph.D. students from a range of academic disciplines including History, Political Science, Religious Studies, Anthropology, and Development Economics. The teaching period runs from mid-April to mid-July for the summer semester, and from mid-October to mid-February for the winter semester. Typically, there are no academic events during the semester break and many colleagues are on research trips.

Scholarship

The DAAD-funded scholarship covers travel costs of up to €1,075 as well as a monthly stipend of €1,200. The scholarship period should overlap with the semester (i.e. between mid-April and mid-July, or between mid-October and mid-February). Assistance in all organizational matters relating to the stay in Göttingen will be provided.

Application procedure

Please send a CV, a two-page research statement, an academic letter of recommendation and a letter of motivation indicating which faculty member you would like to work with and when you intend to join CeMIS to Dr. Michael Dickhardt at study@cemis.uni-goettingen.de, who will also be happy to answer any questions about the scholarship.

The scholarship is advertised at all of CeMIS' partner institutions in the DAAD project.

CALL FOR APPLICATIONS

Scholarships for a two-month guest professorship at CeMIS Winter semester 2022/2023

Within the framework of the DAAD (German Academic Exchange Service) "A New Passage to India" funding line, 2022.

Applications close January 16, 2022.

The Centre for Modern Indian Studies (CeMIS) at the University of Göttingen is dedicated to research and teaching about social, economic and political developments in modern India. The centre adopts an interdisciplinary approach to five major themes: Metamorphoses of the Political, Religion, Inequality and Diversity, Labour and Capital in Modern India, and Media and Public Spheres. The centre has five professors and more than 35 research fellows and Ph.D. students from a range of academic disciplines including History, Political Science, Religious Studies, Anthropology, and Development Economics. The teaching period for which the guest professorship is advertised runs from mid-October 2022 to mid-February 2023.

Scholarships

The DAAD-funded scholarships cover travel costs of up to €1,075 as well as a monthly stipend of €2,300. The selected candidates will teach a 56 teaching-hour (45 minutes each) course at the M.A. level, for which they will receive an honorarium of €40/hour (€40 x 56 = €2,240). The candidates will be required to teach during the winter semester (i.e. between mid-October 2022 and mid-February 2023). Assistance in all organizational matters relating to the stay in Göttingen will be provided.

Application procedure

Please send a CV, two alternative course outlines, and a research statement to karin.klenke@cemis.uni-goettingen.de. Please indicate when you would like to complete your two-month stay. If you have any questions about the scholarship, please contact Dr. Karin Klenke (email see above). Our study coordinator Dr. Michael Dickhardt (study@cemis.uni-goettingen.de) will be happy to answer questions about the study programme.

The scholarship is advertised at all of CeMIS' partner institutions in the DAAD project.
